

Have YOU Seen It?
Everyone's talking about it!

And, now you can own a full-size (18" by 24")
reproduction of Gayle Holmes' unique oil painting "Sherlock's".

Inspired first by husband Dwight's interest in Sherlock Holmes but carried to completion by her abiding passion for painting and her diligent need to recover from a car accident, this singular artist has created a unique and magnificent image that any Holmes fan would be proud to own.

Yet, while featuring such "Sherlockian" elements as a pipe, a magnifying glass and violin, the rich tones and brilliant colors of this painting would compliment the décor of anyone's library, music room, living room or den.

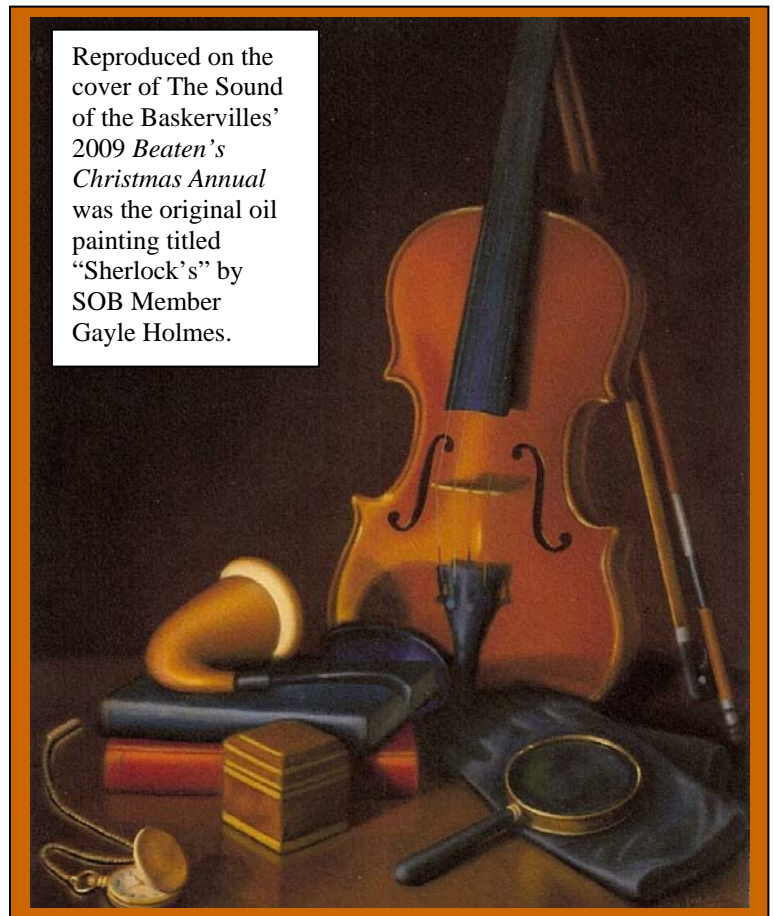

"Sherlock's" first public appearance was on the cover of the 2009 edition of Beaten's Christmas Annual, a regular publication of The Sound of the Baskervilles—the Sherlock Holmes society based in Seattle, WA which serves the entire I-5 corridor in Western Washington—of which Gayle & Dwight are members.

A giclee is a high-quality, near-perfect reproduction of a piece of art—which uses archival inks, paper and canvas and results in the most beautiful and accurate reproduction possible.

Reproductions of "Sherlock's" are now available for individual sale in giclee prints on canvas (framed and unframed) and on note cards. All frames are made of fine hardwoods; framed orders come ready to hang with all hardware included.

To order go to: <http://www.gayleholmesfineart.com/>. Make your affiliation with The Sound of the Baskervilles known to Gayle, and she will donate 10% of your purchase price to the Club's treasury.
