Gorgeous Weather Smiles on Our Wreath Throw!

The day started ominous and threatening as dark clouds covered the sky. But by the time 20 SOBs had arrived in Tumwater just before noon, the sun was coming out. And, the rhododendron club was back with their beautiful displays!

Eighteen SOBs made the trek to the falls; Paul Williams remained behind to announce the official count to the restaurant (which had multiple groups booked that afternoon), as did Barbara Nelson who decided the hike would impair her physical recovery (no doubt from an attack by Moriarty's minions).

Upon arriving at the falls we were serenaded by violin music arranged for by James Romnes. As the beautiful music wafted into the air, Bill Seil read The Honour Roll of those SOBs who are no longer with us. Then all attention was focused on The PFL as he flung the small wreath into the foaming cauldron of the Deshutes River. Convivial drinking then began, and all remarked on what a perfect setting this year's event had been.

Among those attending our Annual Wreath Throw for the first time were Ann & Michael McElvaney, Stephen Adkins and Sheila Holt-

Answer = "Great Scott!"

The June 14, 2010 Meeting of The Sound of the Baskervilles will begin at 6:00 p.m. at T.S. McHugh's Public House, 21 Mercer Street, Seattle, (206) 282-1910. Come early, order dinner and catch up with other SOBs! Many arrive as early as 5:00.

Jack Tracy tells us our 16th chronicle—in order by publication-date—appeared in the Strand for January 1893. Says PFL David: The underlying subject matter in this case—adultery—was considered pretty racy during the Victorian era, and Susan Cushing, a middle-aged maiden lady living quietly, certainly seemed an unlikely candidate for the postal packets she received! But Holmes is happy to accept Lestrade's invitation to look into the case.

Study The Adventure of the Cardboard Box to find out how easy it is for Holmes to assure Lestrade this is no practical joke!!

Treasurer Al's London Trek Full of Excitement

On a recent trip abroad, I attended the March 12 Sherlock Holmes Society of London meeting at the National Liberal Club, 1 Whitehall Place, London. The club was a fascinating site of pictures and caricatures of Liberal politicians in history, Victorian tiles, fireplaces, chandeliers and more...all very British indeed.

Drinks were served before the meeting at the Savage Club Bar. About 35 members attended the dinner and approximately 80 were present for the program that followed. The first speaker was Colonel M.J. Cromwell (retired) OBE, who spoke on the topic, "Maiwand, The Last Stand of the 66th Regiment (Berkshires) Afghanistan 1880", followed by a second, somewhat humorous talk by Dr. Auberger Redfern on "Dr. Watson's Wandering Wounds".

I encountered many great and friendly people that evening. SOB pins were given to District Messenger editor Roger Johnson, the Society's Secretary Catherine Cooke, and member Robert Graham (who said, "This pin has a pride of place in my Sherlockian artifacts cabinet which includes soil and water samples from Reichenbach Falls."). Mr. Graham was my dinner companion along with George and Enid Powers. The meeting was chaired by SHSL Chairman Jonathan McCafferty who was a marvelous raconteur. A letter from an SHSL member serving with the current Red Cross Mission in Kandahar was read into the record; it seems not much has changed in that part of the world, only a few miles from where Maiwand was fought 130 years ago!

On Friday March 19, a green plaque was unveiled at the Langham Hotel commemorating the meeting in 1889 between Joseph Stoddart, editor of Lippincott's Magazine in New York, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Oscar Wilde. This meeting led to the publication of "The Sign of Four" and "The Picture of Dorian Gray".

Doyle agreed to write a story of 45,000 words for a fee of £100. It is interesting to note that had this meeting and the subsequent commission not taken place, there may not have been any further Sherlock Holmes stories.

The unveiling was done by Gyles Brandreth (former TV presenter, former MP and author of a series of mysteries with Oscar Wilde as the hero), and Councilor Robert Davis, Deputy Lord Mayor of the City of Westminster. Two representatives of the Doyle family were also in attendance. Approximately 30 SHSL members attended in a gentle rain, and happily, champagne was served after the unveiling in the hotel.

Things to See, Buy, Do & Know

• From SOB Ann Deussenberry: "I'm a big fan of mystery author C. J. Box, and his new book "Nowhere to Run" just came out. I checked his website to see if he was touring to promote it, and there was a talk scheduled in San Mateo. I attended, and got two books signed! He writes a series of continuing stories about a Wyoming game warden named Joe Pickett, plus he's written two stand-alone books. The shop where the event took place is "M is for Mystery", and their Sherlock Holmes books share shelving, oddly, with Edward Gorey of all people. They carry new books by just about every mystery author out there, plus a huge section of used books. Try these links: www.misformystery.com or www.cjbox.net."

• From SOB Geoff Jeffery: Boom Studios' line of comics based on The Muppets in partnership with Disney has yielded several great Muppet-themed adaptations of famous literary classics, including Robin Hood, King Arthur and, most recently, Snow White. But they're not stopping there. In a recent chat with the folks at Disney, MTV News learned that the next adaptation planned for the line will be "Muppet Sherlock Holmes". According to Disney, "Muppet Sherlock Holmes" will cast Gonzo as Conan Doyle's famous detective and Fozzie as Dr. Watson.

• From SOB Bill Seil: A digitally remastered DVD of "The Great Mouse Detective" was released on April

13. I watched it, and it looks great. I'd forgotten that Alan Young, who does one of the voices, uses the same Scottish accent he employed in the film "The Time Machine".

• From Peter Blau: "Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" is a conference sponsored by the Norwegian Explorers from August 6-8 at the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota. The registration form is now available from Gary Thaden (2301 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55404; norwegianexplorers@gmail.com). The Library will have an exhibition with the same title through August 29, exploring "the many meanings of the word 'spirits' and how they relate to Sherlock Holmes, Conan Doyle, and the Victorian Era".

• From PFL David: Sherlock Holmes For Dummies ($19.99) seems to be a good intro to The Great Detective. I've flipped through various pages, and it makes some good points. Besides, the SOBs are listed on page 340 in the appendix of active North American Sherlockian Societies. We got a review/press release on it via our website, if anyone wants a copy. One of the authors is, appropriately, Steven Doyle, who is a BSI. Roger Johnson gave it a positive review in the latest "District Messenger", though he felt too much was made of The Sherlock Holmes Museum.

According to Treasurer Al Nelson...

The March 10 issue of The Observer reported that the BBC is producing a series of Sherlock Holmes stories, which take place in the 21st century. So far a pilot and three 90-minute episodes have been commissioned. The writers (who also wrote for "Dr. Who") are Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss, and they consummated the deal at The Criterion. Benedict Cumberbatch plays Holmes and Martin Freeman is Watson, and there's a hint that Moriarty survives to the present day. Peter Blau notes that, according to The Hollywood Reporter, PBS-TV is co-producing this effort.

SOB Auction Inspires New Display Wall

From Dwight Holmes: Here is the latest picture/poster arrangement for my office. I bought more posters—even after what I got at the Tea & Auction in March—and now they are all framed or reframed.

Also, James Romnes and I have been doing quite a bit of e-mailing. As you know James is into "guns", especially antique guns. I have lots of guns, most of which are modern. I have two old guns that I have had on my Sherlock shadow boxes for years but just this last week James coached me through an online gun auction, and I won an old 1880's British Bulldog. I am having fun with this!

Here I am holding my newly acquired gun in front of Gayle's "Sherlock's" painting. The plan is for her to do another oil painting called "Watson's", in which we hope to use this new gun. This one is an old .32 cal British Bulldog Forehand and Wadsworth.

Sorry I missed the wreath throw. One of the new posters I bought, though, is of Sherlock struggling at Reichenbach Falls, so I was there in spirit.
